At the Rutgers Center for Minority Institutions (CMSI) and the Samuel, DeWitt Proctor Institute for Leadership, Equity, and Justice (Proctor Institute) we welcome those interested in being Visiting Scholars so that we may aid them in their MSI-related or leadership, equity, justice oriented research and practice.

Appointments are one year long and require the Visiting Scholar to participate in the CMSI's or Proctor Institute's programming and research with concrete deliverables. In return, Visiting Scholars are given access to access to mentoring, professional development, publishing and presentation opportunities, and national exposure for their work.

Deliverables might include (but are not limited to):

◊ Conducting a podcast interview for the Varying Viewpoints podcast series
◊ Authoring a research, policy, practice brief
◊ Initiating a research project
◊ Participating in a webinar/program
◊ Designing and conceptualizing a webinar/program
◊ Attending professional development workshops

If you would like more information on becoming a Visiting Scholar with the CMSI or the Proctor Institute, please contact Natalie Passov at natalie.passov@gse.rutgers.edu.
